Aeropress £3.40

A brewing method that combines immersion with pressure. Designed to make just one strong espresso like cup. An Aeropress uses air pressure, created by a plunger, to enhance the flavour. This process make a flavoursome, full bodied cup of coffee with a real oomph!

V60 £3.50

A classic pour over method of brewing coffee. As the name suggests the walls of the filter are at 60 degrees and is one of the most popular brewing devices in the coffee brewing industry. The process leads to a delicate, light bodied almost tea-like cup, bringing out the nuances of your coffee!

Sweet Vietnamese Coffee (Cà phê sữa nóng) £3.20

Our take on a classic and traditional Vietnamese coffee. This is a sweet filtered coffee poured extremely slowly over a bed of condensed milk. Perfect for those with a sweet tooth.

Cold Brew £2.60

Our freedom blend infused for at least 12 hours which brings all the coffee flavour but leaves behind most of the compounds that can make coffee taste bitter and sour.

Butter Coffee £3.10

Butter has found its way into coffee cups for its purported fat-burning and mental clarity benefits. This frothy KETO coffee is a blend of our Wilberforce blend mixed with un-salted butter & coconut oil.

The Peloton

Noun | pel·o·ton | pe-lə-'tän

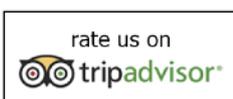

If you've ever watched cycling, or most commonly, le Tour de France, you will have undoubtedly seen or heard the phrase “the peloton”; the brightly coloured, main pack of riders. From this you may have also gained some inadvertent insight into the word itself, which as you may have already guessed is of French origin.

In the French language, “peloton” literally means “ball,” but it is most often used with the meaning “group” or “everyone”. It is commonly used in cycling context, just as in English, but, unbeknown to most it can also refer to a group in any race, marathon or other sporting event.

French peloton can also mean “squad” or “platoon,” and since we've told you that you probably won't be too surprised to learn that it is also the source of our word platoon.

The Peloton, drafted from its translation, is a place for everyone, whether you are a frequent visitor, walking your dog on a Sunday morning, or are just passing by.

We would like to welcome inside to relax and refresh.

Our Coffee

The Wilberforce Freedom Blend!

- A blend of South American Arabica and African Robusta coffee beans
- A medium/dark roast with a wonderful, consistent quality
- Makes a great espresso with a rich and long lasting crema and gentle
- nutty overtones
- Strength guide 5

Wilberforce Freedom, Fair Trade and Locally Roasted

- a Fairtrade brand unique from our supplier & Inspired by Hull's special links to the abolition of slavery and celebrating the name of William Wilberforce and his associates in their achievement.

We picked this coffee because we and our suppliers believe that we should all aim to give a little extra, so our supplier gives 5% of the profits of Wilberforce Freedom products back to Fair Trade related activities every year.

In the past three years our supplier have sent these donations to a Hull based charity called WEFT contributing to the provision of micro loans in the Third World. Most recently they have provided cash for direct support of two coffee bean microwashing facilities in Uganda for the Bukanzo Organics Cooperative Union (BOCU).
